The 2 groups came close to each other. The police needed to set up metallic barriers to separate them. Afterwards, when hundreds of netizens arrived at the Central Government Complex, some changed their minds and marched to Charter Garden to snipe at Richard Tsoi Yiu Cheong, who is the secretary of a community organisation that helps new arrivals to Hong Kong. Starting from Southorn Playground at 3pm yesterday, dozens of people joined the ‘anti-sinicisation’ parade. She said that she had had chemotherapy because of cancer but had recovered. ‘I can’t enjoy any welfare benefits despite paying taxes for dozens of years’. On the other hand, the new arrivals receive support from the government and she wanted to express her dissatisfaction. Moreover, people who were holding dragon and lion flags did not leave at the Central Government Complex. About 20 of them went to Charter Road and sniped at Tsoi when he arrived there. The netizens surrounded him, calling him a ‘traitor’. Tsoi was hit by playing cards, and in the end he was escorted away by 20 policemen. He was confused about why the demonstrators could not express their views politely and he thought that Hongkongers should help one another. He hoped that eventually the public could understand why he is helping the new arrivals.
